“Parenting Skills and Child Development: The Importance of Positive Parenting and the Future of Skill-Based Approaches to Parenting Intervention”

Many parenting interventions include a construct called "positive parenting."

What is positive parenting and why is this construct central to family and parenting skill interventions? This will be a discussion-oriented presentation that will focus on the core components of positive parenting, interventions that have demonstrated effects on positive parenting, and implications for large-scale community dissemination across different cultures and contexts.

Presented in cooperation with the Edna Bennett Pierce Prevention Research Center
